

Subject: Don't stop...

Hey FIRSTNAME, Dave here from Healthy Choices with another great tip on wholesome living.

But first, I got a confession to make...

You see, whitewater kayaking is my thing. And one spring day I found myself staring down a particularly tricky section of the river, visually planning my route.

My mind was recalling the unpleasant beating taken half-way down this non-forgiving stretch of water.

And now that memory was now controlling my actions and holding me back.

Yep, I have to admit that I was scared.

I could not get myself to commit to the run. The fear of what might happen caused me to reconsider my advance. I thought, "Hmmm. What should I do?"

"Okay, I'm just going to go for it."

Woohoo! What fun! Another thrilling experience. The fury of the river had been conquered once again.

What a rush! Big smiles!

But my initial hesitation got me thinking...

How often do we allow the possibility of a bad experience control our actions?

For example, passing on opportunities to participate in activities we really enjoy, just because of those inevitable aches and pains that will be felt afterwards.

And then there is the long time to recover.

Unfortunately, it is a current fact that over 50 million Americans are suffering from joint pain and arthritis.

And the problem only gets worse as we age.

Then you start to wonder:

"Is this the way it's going to be now?"

"Am I over the hill?"

"Will this ever get better?"

You've tried medications. And they have helped to some extent. But there are side effects. They certainly aren't good for the liver.

A natural solution would be preferred. But they are not very effective in relieving the pain.

That is, until now...
